

Appendix 1

Note #1: Data on stores listed below (entries #1-#18) also include examples of content that violate Facebook’s prohibition on hate speech, which Facebook defines as “anything that directly attacks people based on what are known as their ‘protected characteristics’ – race, ethnicity, national origin, religious affiliation, sexual orientation, sex, gender, gender identity, or serious disability or disease.”<sup>1</sup> Facebook’s Community Standards define a “direct attack” as “violent or dehumanizing speech, statements of inferiority, or calls for exclusion or segregation.”<sup>2</sup>

Articles sold by these 18 Facebook stores either a) promote or glorify neo-Nazism, which inherently advocates for the persecution, subjugation, or outright extermination of groups based on their race, ethnicity, national origin, religious affiliation, sexual orientation, gender identity or serious disability or disease, b) directly encourage violent acts against individuals based on their race, or religious affiliation, or c) directly advocate for systems of white supremacy, which entails the persecution, subjugation, or use of violence against groups based on their race, ethnicity, national origin, or religious affiliation, and frequently also includes groups based on their sexual orientation, gender identity or serious disability or disease.

The individuals who are selling merchandise directly on Facebook, or are using Facebook to advertise their products, are seeking to both profit off of hate, as well as use social media to amplify their political message.

Note #2: Data on groups listed below (entries #19-#40) are for organizations or groups that promote the ideologies of neo-Nazism or white supremacy, and the affiliated principles of racism, anti-Semitism, Islamophobia, xenophobia, and homophobia. Facebook’s Community Standards prohibit the platform’s use by “organizations or individuals that are engaged in...organized hate.”<sup>3</sup> Facebook defines hate organizations as Any association of three or more people that is organized under a name, sign, or symbol and that has an ideology, statements, or physical actions that attack individuals based on characteristics, including race, religious affiliation, nationality, ethnicity, gender, sex, sexual orientation, serious disease or disability.

33. Scottish Nationalist Society

URL: <https://www.facebook.com/ScottishNationalistSociety/>

Active: Yes

Reason for inclusion: The Scottish Nationalist Society (SNS) is a new group that emerged after National Action and Scottish Dawn were proscribed by the British government. While SNS claims to be unaffiliated with any previously existing organization, their iconography copies other white supremacist groups: they use a white power version of the Celtic Cross and a triskelion flag in the layout of a Nazi flag using the same colors (red background, white circle, black symbol). On their website the group describes itself as a “revolutionary nationalist movement,” organizing in cells that advocate for “closed borders” and reintroducing “section 28 to prohibit the promotion of homosexuality in our schools,” as well as opposing “race mixing.”<sup>27</sup>

No one should have to see posts they consider hateful on Facebook, so we want to help you avoid things like this in the future.

If you want us to look at something specific in this or another group, you can report that exact content (ex: photo) instead of the entire group.

From the list above, you can also hide, unfollow or leave Christian Identity Truth directly. If you unfollow the group, you'll stay in it but you won't see their posts in your News Feed.

You may also consider using Facebook to speak out and educate the community around you. Counter-speech in the form of accurate information and alternative viewpoints can help create a safer and more respectful environment.
